

JACK & LILLY

Jack & Lilly is a brother-sister duo comprised of singer/guitarist Brennon John and singer/violinist Breanne Venios. The two musicians have been performing together at various coffeehouses, bars, and festivals in and around the Western Pennsylvania region for nearly ten years.

Brennon John, though born into a society that has long since abandoned true roots music, has breathed life back into a genre that has fallen out of public popularity. While working to complete his college studies under the guise of student of architecture, Brennon produced a vast body of work and cultivated his love for roots music. Upon realizing that his art had but a waning audience on the home front, Brennon packed his bags and headed for the Nashville skyline. While in Nashville, Brennon was able to collaborate with some of music's finest talent and develop his own signature blend of folk-infused country blues. In 2005, Brennon John walked away from the bright lights of the Music City to operate his music career from his home in the Pennsylvania mountains.

During the time Brennon John was delving into roots music, his sister, Breanne Venios, was walking the other side of the musical spectrum, receiving a classically trained musical education. While she held first chair in her high school orchestra and competed state wide with her violin, her flawless voice brought her the honor of Keystone Idol by belting out an a cappella rendition of Patsy Cline's

"Walkin' After Midnight" in the final round. With her disciplined classical tendencies and keen musician's ear, Breanne Venios brings a refinement to Brennon John's raw style, creating a sound that is wholly unique to Jack & Lilly.
